

From: Garry Heaton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/16/01 8:57pm
Subject: What about XP?

Hello at the DoJ

While the courts have been prevaricating over what penalties to impose on Microsoft the grotesque monopoly has delivered its ultimate coup - Windows XP - which represents nothing less than a nose-thumbing of the whole anti-trust case. This operating system, and the characteristic business practices associated with it, will do more to strangle competition on the desktop than all of the previous MS operating systems put together. Why hasn't this product been taken into account? Why is Microsoft able to continue with its monopolistic practices?

American business law is a sham. There is no justice. Big business can buy its way out of anything.

Garry Heaton